

Create a No-Sew Matzah Cover from Fabric

1. You can use any fabric you have already. Consider cutting up an old T-shirt, using a bandanna or using other fabric you have.
2. Measure against your matzah (probably 8" wide and 7" high).
3. If you have a longer, rectangular piece of fabric, cut it to 12" wide and 24" long. Fold over the fabric in half (right-side out). You'll fold it over and just need to do the no-sew tying technique along the sides.
4. If you have smaller pieces, cut each one to 12" square. On two corners, cut out a 2" square. You'll do the no-sew tying technique on three of four sides.
5. Cut 2" strips along the sides (2 opposite sides if you started with a rectangle, 3 sides if you started with two squares) spaced approximately ½" apart. You can mark the length and spacing lightly with a pencil before cutting with scissors.
6. Tie the strips (the top and bottom one) together in a single or double knot, starting from the back and moving to the front, where there will be the opening for the matzah.
7. Decorate the outside with markers, glue-on items, etc.

Here is a graphic from LeeAnn Peterson to illustrate the technique for two square pieces of fabric. Leave one side uncut/untied to be able to put the three pieces of matzah in.
